Excerpt: . . . fond visions were dissipated like a pricked bubble. And I believe it was my over-cautiousness in walking a road without boots that proved my undoing. IV--RECAPTURED--I WAS SENTENCED TO SOLITARY CONFINEMENT A policeman challenged me and I replied--I hadnt much German--Deutsch. All, I think, would have gone well had he not glanced at my feet. Then he promptly switched on an electric lamp, worn at his breast, and covered me with a revolver. The game was up; my race was run! I had to admit that I was an Englanderf To add to my mortification, I learned from the officer that I was only five or six kilometres from the Dutch frontier. Well, to give the German his due, that policeman played the good Samaritan. He knocked up a cottager and got me some coffee and bread--and never did anything taste so sweet. I was utterly reckless as to my fate, for I had developed a devil-may-care frame of mind. I was disappointed--that was inevitable. Who wouldnt have been disappointed at seeing a scheme that had arrived so near fruition come toppling down like a house of cards Punishment I knew I should get, and punishment I certainly eceived. I was sentenced to ten days solitary confinement in a cell, at first totally dark, to which the light was gradually admitted. Next I was paraded round the camp as a standing example of Germanys might, and a hideous warning to evil-doers. A red...
